GOUGH'S GOSSIP.

Some Experiences.

The announcement that the great temperance apostle, John B. Gough, was to deliver a lecture in Lincoln Hall last evening sufficed to test the seating capacity of the hall to the utmost, the andience comprising the leading citizens of the District and their families. Mr. Gough was exactly on time, and after being introduced to the assembly by Mr. A. S. Pratt, proceeded at once to the work of the evening. He stated that the title of his lecture would be, "Platform and Personal Experiences Gleaned from Thirty-eight Years of Public Life." He began by saying that by this time his audiences had learned from him, as he was content to deal with a brief resume of his early training and ambition, in which he announced that his first idea was to become a preacher. A visit to the theatre quickly dispelled such a thought, however, and he thought an actor's life would suit him better. An amusing discription of his experience as a stage-struck | hero followed, which caused the audience to roar with laughter, and the speaker, warming up with his theme, fired volley after volley of side-splitting anecdotes into its midst, causing the walls to resound with mirth, The subject of platform experiences was only alluded to once, when he spoke of his fear of audiences, and the moral courage it required for rambled along on both sides of the ocean and drew from his inexhaustible fund of anecdotes illustrations of every point he made, and at no time did interest lag. He closed with a most forcible sppeal in favor of the temperance cause, in which the language and descriptions used made his former efforts seem mere dross, so closely did he hold the mirror up to nature. It is only on this subjet that Mr. Gough becomes truly eloquent, and last evening's talk was not an exception.

necessary for the seeker after information to visit the rink on New York avenue to get at the prime cause of this prediction. Once inside this structure, the rest is plain. Here is a huge rectangular parallelogram of hard, smooth asphalt, with treachery stamped in every square inch of black, shining face. Flying hither and thither over this frictionless surface are gay groups of ladies and gentlemen, ranging from the roguish young miss, in short skirts and loose curls, attended by a juvenile swell in a polo cap and abbreviated sack coat, to the dowager of forty-five, escorted by a well-preserved youth, who, despite his fifty summers, is evidently a "goer." As the crowd sweeps by at the rate of twenty miles an hour the spectator can admire the grace McArthur, Chicago; W. B. Berry, Elmira, N. Y.; E. and skill displayed, and, by noting the panorama R. Baxter and C. T. Roters, Palladelphia; R. G. of faces, form some idea of the extent of the skat ing mania and the character of the devotees to this beautiful and healthful exercise. It is not all grace and skill, however. Note that wretch who holds nervously to the hand-rail and clumps heavily forward at a snail's pace, ever and anon engaging in a frantic struggle with that left foot, which, rejoicing in the facilities afforded by a fourteeninch Plimpton skate, appears determined to strike out for itself, independent of the will of the would-be skatist. It is his first effort in public, and all the admonitions of the instructor have been jammed out of his whirling brain by his first fall, wherein he sat down with a force calculated to bankrupt a Keely motor, and felt for the end of Here comes a group who are all premier force. George Boyd, John Giddings, Bart Riddle, Jack Mercer, and Arthur Harrison, all crack skaters and polo players, skimming along with that ease The ladies are out in force, too, many of them being magnificent skaters, the most noticeable perhaps being Miss Marian Cutter, Miss Strong, Miss Pairo, Miss Mamie Jones, Mrs. Hoff, Mrs. Dr. Bean, the Misses Riddle, Miss Duncan, and the Misses Zamacona. There are a host of notables out also. J. Stanley Brown, the President's private secretary; Butler Mahone, the son of Virginia's famous Senator, who both skate well, and a half score of diplomats, who skate lazily, flirt charmingly, and fire bon mots at each other in that pure Parisian accent that makes Mrs. General Gilflory, who whirls along beside them, feel like snatching a handful city of blonde frizzes out of her new "Thompson wave." Here comes

SOME OF THE SKATERS.

A WESTERN CONGRESSMAN who, after a painful series of experiences, during a course of private lessons, has bloomed out as a star of the first magnitude. See him glide around, his 210 pounds avoirdupois seemingly changed to a feather's weight! Mark how he mops his brow with a red silk bandana and whispers to a friend, "It's the pace and not the distance that kills!" Monday, Friday, and Saturday nights are the occasions to see the Rink at its best. On these evenings the West End is out in force. The gay tollettes of the ladies, some of them singularly novel and appropriate, the inspiring strains of the band. and the melodious sound of many voices rising and falling above the whir of the rollers, making a scene at once brilliant and inspiriting. Comic episodes crop out continuously. During the inauguration week a stalwart six-footer from the favored soil of Ohio found his way to the rink. and for some minutes gazed in admiration upon the crowd of flying skaters. Something in the scene recalled his boyhood's days, and his memory wandered back to the moonshiny nights on the old mill-pond, where he had cut figure 8's on a pair of old "Dutch curled tips." A determined light came into his eye, and, striding to the skate -window, he invested in a pair of "Plimptons." With ill-concealed impatience he allowed the attendant to adjust the straps, and, motioning him aside, he launched out on the surface with the air of a conquering hero. The difference between

ICE AND BOLLER SKATING is maryelous to the uninitiated, and, in the short space of five minutes, our "Buckeye" stalwart had fallen in every way and shape that it was possible for the human form to assume without breaking. The band was playing the " Chimes of Normandy Lanciers," and, after puffing for a moment, and gathering fresh enthusiasm from the music, our Ohio friend bent to his work again. This time he made the circuit of the building, and began to feel more confident. Just as he got opposite the orchestra he bethought himself of paralyzing a graceless youth, who was following and laughing at him, by executing a figure 8 in the old and inimitable style of the mill-Black and Col'd Brocade Silks. pond. He struck out bravely with his right foot, Linen Lawns, 25c; Pacific when the treacherous rollers stole out from under him with the speed of lighting. For five seconds the air was full of coat tails, No. 12 gaitcrs, and waving arms and legs. Then he balanced himself on his head for another second and subsided into a helpless, floundering mass. As he raised himself on his elbow the orchestra closed the last two bars of the "grand chain" with that vigorous "ha-ha" which the composer has injected amid the strains of the instruments. With a brow blacker than midnight, the man from the Western Reserve felt for his pen-knife, cut the The Famous Temperance Lecturer Gives skate-straps, and gained his feet. Walking stiffly up in front of the leader of the band, he shook his clenched hand under his nose, exclaiming, "You think you are derned smart, don't you?" and left the asphalt forever. Verily, let not him who putteth on his skates boast himself as he who taketh them off. WANTED WHISKY,

THE ART OF COOKING. What American Girls are Deficient In-

How They Should be Instructed.

"What shall we eat, and what shall we drink, and wherewithal shall we be clothed?" are the questions that fill with anxious care the minds of American housekeepers. The French nation seems to have solved the problem more satisfactorily. In matters of dress, their modistes give fashions to the civilized world, and the French cuisine satisfies epicurian tastes, and is even accepted, with a few national growls, by John Bull. American ladies acquire the arts of the toilette with wonderful facility, as compared with our English sisters, who are called "dowdy," and a costume that rivals Worth can be procured in "Where is your pard?" inquired the officer, New York. But in the preparation of food we have still much to learn. Monsieur Blot (a Frenchman) gave lessons in cookery in our large cities a few years ago, which roused the public mind to a sense of our ignorance and extravagance. He illustrated his lectures, and with a small pan of charcoal and a few materials he would AMUSEMENTS. 'The Tourists" and the "Phœnix"-Clarke, and Rice's Surprise Party.

"The Tourists" have been highly successful in their engagement this week, the audiences at the National Theatre having testified in the most emphatic manner their great gratification and amusement. The company is one of extraordinary excellence, and it would be difficult to bring together an equal number of ladies and gentlemen who would make the same amount of fun. The last performances take place to-day. The matinee will, of course, be crowded, and the boxsheet indicates a full house to-night.

FORD'S OPERA-HOUSE. Milton Nobles' new play, "A Man of the People," has in it strong elements of success, and, with some judicious pruning, will become quite popular. Mr. Nobles himself has an excellent opportunity to display his abilities, and it also brings Miss Dolly Woolwine into greater prominence. She showed herself possessed of greater talent than she was credited with, and was rewarded with a call before the curtain, which she richly merited. "A Man of the People" will be given at the matinee, and to-night "The Phoenix" will be presented at the final performance of this company. J. S. CLARKE. This talanted comedian will commence an engagement at Ford's Opera-House on Monday night. He comes fresh from his London success, and so far he has been greeted with overflowing houses wherever he has appeared in this country. His opening plays are "The Heir-at-Law" and "Toodles," and of these plays the Pittsburg Gazette says, as follows: "Mr. Clarke's Dr. Pangloss is known wherever that gentleman has been seen, and dear to the memory of all theatre-goers who enjoy harmless dramatic humor. The portraiture of the dapper, venal, and shallow little pedant is full of rich and happy humor. The pompous pride which he takes in his titles of LL D. and A. S. S., his weak attempts at carrying out the virtues which belong to his character, and his ready surrender to the temptations of money and the commands of his rich pupil, are sketched with a free hand Metropolitan .- S. J. Cond. Morristown, Tenn.; and thoroughly appreciated. The more uproarious humor of "Toodles" sent the audience away with aching sides. Mr. Clarke's rather riotous exuberance of fun in that standard of broad, low comedy acting was the chief attraction. His Toodles is irresistible, no matter how familiar the hearer may be with it." RICE'S SURPRISE PARTY.

Mr. Edward E. Rice, whose "Surprise Party begins an engagement at the National next Monday, though a young man of thirty-two, is one of the most prominent of theatrical operators. Besides the strong organization above referred to, he owns the favorite "Evangeline" Combination, the Fun on the Bristol" Company (in conjunction with Mr. Jarrett), and has a half interest in the great New York success, "Billee Taylor," which has created the greatest furore ever achieved by comic opera in this country, not even excepting "H. M. S. Pinafore." A notable thing about Mr. Rice is the number of new famous "stars" that have been enlisted under his banner during the past six years before they had attained stellar honors. The list includes William H. Crane, George S. Knight, Sol Smith Russell, Nat Goodwin, William A. Mestayer, Willie Edonin, Alice Atherton, Louis Harrison, poor Harry Hunter (who was to have starred next season), Sophie Worrell (Mrs. Knight), Eliza Weathersby, Lizzie Webster, Venie Clancy (both well married and retired), and dozens of others. Mr. Rice employs over 300 people in his various enterprises, and pays most liberal salaries. Washington will soon have an opportunity of hearing his latest venture, "Billee Taylor," which will shortly be produced at the National with all the completeness of its New York pre-

Casey had to dismiss some of the men, owing two-thirds of lot 3 in square 406 in this city, valued at about $10,000 or $12,000, and involves legal points of unusual interest. By his will, dated February 17, 1832. James Walker devised lot 6 in held their regular monthly meeting at their square 403 to his brother, Henry Walker. As a armory, Tuesday evening, and, by the request of matter of fact James Walker, the testator, did not some of the honorary members, the company was at the time of making said will, and never did, own lot 6 in square 403, though he did own lot 3 in square 406. Henry Walker, assuming to be the owner of the property under the provision of the will above set out, conveyed the same to Thomas Sewall in 1842, by whom it was conveyed, in 1852, to John Brereton. Patch, the plaintiff, claimed ownership by virtue of a deed in 1873, from Brereton's heirs. The testator, James Walker, left as his heir an infant son, James C. Walker, and his widow, Ann S Walker, who subsequently married George Parker, late of this city. The infant, becoming of age, died, leaving by will his property to his mother. Under a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States it was determined that Mrs. Parker was entitled to one-third of the lot in question by virtue of certain provisions in the will of James Walker, her husband, and the present suit is therefore, as stated, for two-thirds of the lot under the same will. The plaintiff put the will in evidence, and offered proof to show that the testator intended to convey to his brother lot 3 in square 406, and not lot 6 in square 403, as set out in the will; that this intention had been admitted by all parties: that those under whom plaintiff claimed had, prior to dispossession by defendant's grantees' ancestor, collected two-thirds of the rents, &c. This was demurred to by defendant as inadmissible, being parol to change the language of the will. The argument pro and con was spirited and learned, and attracted many members of the bar to the court-room. At the conclusion of the argument the judge sustained the demurrer, and directed a verdict for the defendant. Messrs, Merrick and McPherson & Carlisle represented the plaintiff, and Messrs. Davidge and Gordon & Gordon the defendant.

Singular Coincidences. There is a singular coincidence connected with President Lincoln's first candidacy for the Presidency. Hannibal Hamlin was the candidate for Vice-President with him, and it is a singular fact that Mr. Lincoln's own name also included that of Mr. Hamlin: thus-Abra[ham Lin]celn. We do not know whether this coincidence has ever been pointed out before or not, but it certainly is a curious one.

Andrew Johnson was the candidate for Vice-President at Lincoln's second election. Mr. Lincoln had a brother named Mordecal Lincoln, who died some years before Uncle Abe's first election. The justice of the peace who married Andrew Johnson was named Mordecai Lincoln. Whether Uncle Abe's relative or not history fails to state.

tice Hagner presiding, Mrs. Susannah Fowler, guardian to her infant children, reported the sale of a portion of the real estate in which they had an interest, made in pursuance of an order passed in 1875 by Justice Olin, and asked to have the same approved, in accordance with the previous practice of that court as understood by the bar. Justice Hagner declined to approve the same, on the ground that, in his opinion, the Orphans' Court was without authority to order a sale of infant's real estate. He suggested to Mr. Barnard, who presented it, that he had no objection to his asking any other judge to sign it, and thereupon Mr.

He Favors an Extra Session.

To the Editor of The Republican: I see the question of an extra session of Congress is being discussed. You seem to favor it, while many of the sages of the party oppose it. Viewed from the Republican standpoint, it seems to me that there should be no controversy, no doubt, and no hesitancy in calling an extra session. If, as charged by the Republicans, that the voters in the ex-rebel cotton States were bulldozed last fall, and their votes not counted as cast, and by the many other patent ways of the exrebels to prevent an honest election and honest count, Democrats got certificates of election to Congress when the Republican candidate should have had the certificates, and, as it is further charged by the contending candidates in these States, that their witnesses are persecuted and even murdered for testifying to the facts of the case, making it impossible to prosecute these contests, Congress should be convened and committees sent during the summer and fall to those States to inquire into the facts of the case. High-sounding inaugurals have no influence for the protection of these contestants, and when the regular session meets in December almost one-half of the term of the Congress is gone, and no committee can then be sent South to inquire into the facts of the case, and the result will be that the contest will drag along un-til the end of the Congress, when the sitting mem-ber will be allowed to hold his seat, and the contestant, if not murdered in the meantime, will be paid for his contest. If the administration mean to vindicate the purity of elections and punish those who have made elections in the South a farce, now is the time to do it. Action, not promises, is the word. Members of Congress are now being paid nearly $500 a month. They have time to investigate this summer-they cannot in the winter—and there will be an election on hand the next fall. If there is no extra session the only object of contest will be the pay the contestant will receive. But, says the tariff man, an extra session will commence war on the tariff and upset business. I take it that the next Congress will have time enough to appoint a com-mission of suitable men who understand the tariff question from an American standpoint to investigate the whole subect and report to Congress some general policy for the collection of the needed revenue. There comes the man who is terribly uneasy for fear that Tom Jones will be paid for a spavined horse lost in the Mexican war if there is an extra session of Congress. It might be better to have no more sessions of Congress, and then Tom Jones would never be paid for the lost horse. This is the argument against an extra session, and it is the only argument that means anything. I do not know whether Sherman and the President meant what they said about the necessity of a funding bill, nor do I know whether they were right or wrong in their statesments; but if they were right it will be a great and grievous wrong to the people if there is not an extra session and a funding bill passed. It has got to be a preity settled conviction among the people that the declaration of politicians is all buncombe. If that is so, and there is no need of protecting the people who vote the Republican ticket in the South, and there is no need of passing a funding bill, there is no need of an extra session of Congress; for such session would incon-venience the President and Cabinet officials and members of Congress. If an extra session was held they could not get off to watering places quite as soon as if there was no session. ANTI-BOURBON. Views of a Representative Colored Man.

Your editorial in the issue of the 18th

To the Editor of The Republican:

instant on "The Colored Voter" is pregnant with solid facts, good advice, and common sense. As a native of Virginia, beneath whose historic soil my ancestors for three generations lie buried, I wish rule which was in force under General Grant. The | to give my approval of the action of the late con-President asked several questions regarding the vention at Petersburg, and to add my God-Sad Effect of Extra-Session Rumors.

The wild rumors of an extra session looking heavy or sour bread, green looking biscuit, watery potatoes, and soup, &c., that he would give the matter his personal attention and advised the looking biscuit, watery potatoes, and soup, &c., and soup that he would give the matter his personal attention and advised the looking biscuit, watery potatoes, and soup, &c., looking biscuit, watery potatoes, water potatoes, w patriot for the public good. That the spirit of patriotism actuated the men who compose the convention the proceedings fairly indicate, and it is only a question of time when the wisdom of their action will be fully demonstrated in the overthrow of Bourbonism and the emancipation of the State from the tyranny of its oppression. Colored voters of Virginia have much to gain from an alliance with the independent movement that is now taking deep root in the States and whose influence has been transplanted in the United States Senate. Their disenthrallment from political serfdom lies in their support of Senator Mahone and the liberal policy of the coalition of which he is the exponent policy of the coalition of which he is the exponent and whose ultimate purposes are the relief of the State from its burdensome debt and the restoration of the political equality of the whole people regardless of race, color, or previous condition. It is obvious that the Republican party of Virginia is powerless, and a blind persistence of the colored voter to adhere strictly to party ties will defeat the object of the friends of good government and postpone the advent of the progressive era now dawning upon the State. The extraordinary scene enacted on the floor of the United States Scuate on the 14th Instant, of which Senator Mahone was the central figure, has given full proof to the country that his scathing The cross-examination of Dr. Ball was continued by Colonel William A. Sellhausen, who died at his residence, No. 722 Seventh street northwest, on the 18th instant, took place yesterday afternoon. A vast concourse of friends and acquaintances of the deceased, among whom a great many of our prominent German fellow-citizens, were present at the finneral obsequies and followed the remains to their last resting-place, at Prospect Hill Cemetery. The Rev. Mr. Stern officiated at the house and at the grave.

The late Mr. Sellhausen was born in 1827, in Rheds, in the Prussian Province of Westphalia. Coming to this city, in 1846, he had resided here continuously until his death. Upon his arrival here he engaged in the cigar manufacturing business, and, by his industry and frugality, close attention to business, combined with the strictest integrity, he gained a comfortable fortune and a respected position as a citzen of our community. The deceased took especial pride in educational and other useful public matters. He was one of the first promoters of a German-English school, at a time when the German population of the city was but very meagre indeed. During the days of our civil war he served on the Sanitary Commission, and went often to the front to alleviate the sufferings of our wounded and sick soldiers. He was also interested in the German-American Fire Insurance Company—in fact, one of its incorporators—and kindred business institutions of our city. He leaves a wife and eight children to mourn his early demise.
